

Alan Boyer
Founding Manager

Alan Boyer is the Founding Managing Partner of iThrive Learning Architects LLC, a higher-education innovation firm that advises universities, educators, and employers in designing employer-aligned programs — and the curriculum, credentials, partnerships, marketing strategy and operating models to sustain them. He bridges executive leadership and academic design, shaped by a career spanning C-suite and management roles at Coca-Cola, AT&T, Equifax, and First Data, and teaching and academic leadership at Kansas State University, John Marshall Law School and Kennesaw State University.

He has served as a guest lecturer and curriculum collaborator with institutions including Stanford University, Columbia University, Syracuse University, and the University of Chicago. His work introduces the HUMAN operating system required in an AI-driven workplace, articulated in his book The 7 Communication Superpowers for 2035, which outlines the human capabilities technology cannot replace. He is also a member of the management faculty in the School of Business at Georgia Gwinnett College.
